★ INFORMED CONSENT ★

Every type of health care is associated with some risk of a potential problem. This includes chiropractic health care. We want you to be informed about potential problems associated with chiropractic health care before consenting to treatment. This is called informed consent.

Chiropractic adjustments are the moving of bones with the doctor's or with the use of a machine. Frequently adjustments create a "pop" or "click" sound/sensation in the area being treated.

In this office, we use trained staff personnel to assist the doctor with portions of your consultation, examination, x-taking, physical therapy application, traction, massage therapy, exercise instruction, etc. Occasionally when your doctor is unavailable, another doctor will treat you on that day.

Stroke: Stroke is the most serious problem associated with chiropractic adjustments. Stroke means that a portion of the brain does not receive enough oxygen from the blood stream. The results can be temporary or permanent dysfunction of the brain, with a very rare complication of death. Chiropractic adjustments have been associated with strokes that arise from the vertebral artery only; this is because the vertebral artery is actually found inside the neck vertebrae. The adjustment that is related to vertebral artery stroke is called the "extension-rotation-thrust atlas adjustments" We do not do this type of adjustment on patients. Other types of neck adjustments may also potentially be related to vertebral artery stroke, but no one is certain. The most
